DINNER TABLE TALK

SHE: Why don't you look as cheerful as this when you are dining at home? Your face has been beaming all through dinner.

ME: Well, my dear, we have had a very good dinner, haven't we?

CHE: Yes, I suppose that's the reason. I really think nothing pleases you men so much as a good dinner.

HE: I suppose everybody likes that.

SHE: I begin to think Punch was right in the advice he gave to the young married girl whose husband was not treating her very well

ME: What was that, my dear?

EME: Mr. Punch said—"Feed the brute!"

ME: I should prefer to put it a little more delicately —in fact, as the Duke of Connaught did at the Cookery Exhibition. SHE: Did he make a speech?

HE: Yes, and he said that "good cookery brought happiness into the home, and did a good deal to make a husband's life happy."2

SHE: I admit that we have had a most excellent dinner here, but you can't expect to get such perfect cooking at home.

ME: Why not? Here comes the Manager. Let us ask him how it is done. (Asks him.)

MANAGER: Two things are absolutely essential for a good dinner—First-rate material, and the best cooking. The cooking is the chief difficulty.

ME: Then you probably agree with the Duke of Connaught when he said that "no country had better material to be cooked than ours, but he feared that in the past much good food had been wasted by bad cooking."

MANAGER: In private families that can searcely be avoided; for instance, the modern kitchener, although very useful, cannot roast meat like the good old-fashioned open

SME. How do you do your reasting?

MANAGER: Here at Simpson's-in-the-Strand we roast all our joints at a very large open fire. Baked meats would never do for our guests.

EHE: I suppose you cook a very large number of joints at Simpson's, don't you?

MANAGER: Yes, Madam. Since we reopened last year we have cooked over 10,000.

SHE: Well, you must have given great satisfaction to have cooked that immense number. Bu how is it your meat is so deliciously tender MANAGER: Our most is the very finest, and we hang it until it is perfect for the spit. Private houses cannot hang meat like we do; they have not sufficient facilities. Our steady daily sale enables us to provide relays of joints hanging in the larder, which no private house can do.

SHE: I wish you would let me send my cook to Simpson's for a week.

HE: That is a capital idea.

MANAGER: Similar requests are made every day.
We should be delighted to oblige our guests, but it would necessitate our kitchen being made three or four times its present

SHE: Look, my dear, at all those clergymen and their wives coming in.

HE: Why, there's a Bishop amongst them!

MES Why, there's a Bishop amongst them!

MANAGER: Simpson's is a favourite dining place with the clergy, who always come in very large numbers during the May meetings.
They appreciate good wholesome food properly cooked and seem to enjoy it so much.

SHE: Well, I hope they will have a cut off as good a saddle of mutton as we had; it was explentifit.

splendid.

NE: Yes, and I never ate a finer turbot. The lobster sauce was perfect, too.

MANAGER: During all the years I have been at Simpson's I have never had such a chorus of praise as during the past season.

SHE: Why was that?

MANAGER: Wagner's "Ring" was played at the Opera at Covent Garden, and during the interlude for dinner we were simply crowded out with distinguished guests.

SHE: Were they in evening dress?

MANAGER: Yes, all of them, and wearing the most lovely diamonds and other jewels. The room looked brilliant.

room looked brilliant.

HE: Well, of course, this Ladies' Dining Room is charming. It is one of the most attractive rooms I have ever dined in.

SHE: The white Adams decoration is so sweet, and those dainty Angelica Kauffmann pictures on the walls and ceiling are

MANAGER: It was a pleasure to serve them, they were so loud in their appreciation.
The ladies liked our boiled Surrey fowls and Bath chaps, for which we are celebrated, and the early English asparagus was in great denand.

ME: Did they have this Cheddar? What a splen-did cheese.

MANAGER: Ves, and it was thoroughly enjoyed.

We are very famous for our Cheddars;
these in cut took the first prize at the Somerset Dairy Show.

HE: I've been told that you have got some specially manager: I am sorry to say it is going very fast. In 1892 we bought a bin of 1851 Port, which was bott ed at Ha field Peverel, in Essex, in 1855, and we moved it straight from there to Simpson's.

SME: I have heard that the Knights of the Round Table dine here. Who are these Knights?

MANAGER: It is a select literary and theatrical club, composed of celebrated writers and actors. The members have for many years met at dinner once a week at a famous round table, which is almost historic.

HE: You managed to rehouse them in your new building?

MANAGER: Yes, I am glad we were able to give them a club-room. The fine old bound table presented a difficulty. When the old Simpson's was pulled down we found that it would not be possible to get the round table through the windows of the new building.

SME: But didn't you say it is here?

MARAGER: It is, Madam. The club-room had virtually to be built up around the table.

EME: How pathetic! It is almost as if the table said, "I have been here for so many years and I refuse to move."

MANAGER: Well, the table certainly got its own way, for it was the only thing in the old building which retained its position.

SME: Do many Americans come here?

MANAGER: We have a very large number. They are always interested in the historical associations of Simpson's. They like to hear about the Rebel Peers dining here and the celebrated statesmen, lawyers, actors, and journalists who have been so attached to SME: Do you mean the Rebel Peers who joined in the rising of the Pretender? What year was that?

MANAGER: Yes. It was in 1715. This house was called "The Fountain" then. The Fountain Club had its meetings here 200

HE: What kind of a club was that?

MANAGER: It consisted of the political opponents of Walpole, of whom Pulteney, afterwards Earl of Bath, was the foremost. It was in connection with one of these meetings that Sir C. H. Williams wrote his eelebrated lines on Pulteney, which no doubt you re-

SHE: No I'm afraid I don't What were then? MANAGER:

There enlarge on his cunning and wit, Say how he harangued at the Fountain, Say how the old patriots were bit, And a mouse was produc'd by a mountain."

SHE: What did the Rebel Peers do?

MANAGER: You remember they were beheaded at the Tower, and on their way back from their trial at Westminster they persuaded the Captain of the Guard to allow them to stop here and have one good dinner.

SHE: And did he?

MANAGER: Yes, but the Lord Chancellor was very angry.

SHE: There! The ruling passion strong in death!
Oh! you men. Mr. Punch was quite right.
You do dearly love your food!

HE: I don't think, my dear, you can say much.
You seem to have enjoyed your dinner.

SHE: Yes, but it has been an exceptionally good manager: Thank you, Madam, for the compliment. I hope you will honour us with your company again. May I say that Simpson's is open on Sundays from 6 p.m., and that many of our customers bring family parties on Sunday evenings when their cooks are of

PEACE HOPES GROW FAINTER. French Soldiers in West Africa

Envoys Await the Word to Break Off the Conference.

PREPARING TO LEAVE

Everything Points to a Continuance of the War.

Prospects of peace grow fainter and fainter.

Yesterday was expected to decide the question. nothing. They are simply waiting for the word from their home Governments that is either to settle the terms of the treaty or put a million men in Manchuria once more in battle array.

Meanwhile pessimism reigns supreme, and the envoys are making preparations for departure. The only point in favour of peace is that the negotiations have not yet been broken off, as was expected. The meeting of the Conference which was to have taken place vesterday afternoon has been postponed till to-day.

and Cession of Territory.

Portsmouth (N.H.), Tuesday.—It has been-decided to postpone until to-morrow the meeting of the Peace Conference, which was to have taken place this afternoon.

Although the official reason assigned for the postponement of the meeting of the Conference is the fact that the drafting of the protocols is not yet completed, it is suggested that the real reason for the delay is that M. Witte is awaiting final instructions from St. Petersburg.

There are strong indications that when the Conference reasembles the Iapanese plenipotentiaries will intimate that they are prepared to forego Articles X. and XI. of the peace terms, which relate to the Interned warships and the limitation of Russian naval power in the Far East; but it is not believed here that they are prepared to recede from the positions which here has they are prepared to recede from the positions of the positions.—Reuter.

Russians Say Hope Is Absolutely Lost Through Japan's Excessive Demands.

NEW YORK, Tuesday Morning.—The Portsmouth correspondents of the "New York World" and the "New York Sun" have obtained an official statement of the Russian position, which runs as fol-ment of the Russian position, which runs as a lower of the Russian position, which runs as a wellows:—

"We do not believe in the possibility of peace resulting from the present situation.

"We cannot say before to-morrow that all hope is absolutely lost, but the hope seems to us small that, in fact, we consider all hope is lost.

"We consider now, as we have always done, that peace is an absolute necessity for Russia, but the greediness, and obstinacy of the Japanese will compel the continuance of the war.

"We deny in the most formal manner that President Rosevett has proposed that the Russians shall buy Saghalien for the amount of the indemnity.

"We wish further to announce that the Tara sent."

"We wish further to announce that the Tsar sent personally to M. Witte telegrams from General Linievitch praying the Tsar to continue the war."— Central News.

CONCESSIONS FROM JAPAN

NEW YORK, Tuesday.—The "New York Times" publishes a telegram from Oyster Bay in which it is predicted that concessions on the part of Japan will be announced at Portsmouth to-day.

The other newspapers are pessimistic, but they generally agree that the Conference will continue from day to day.—Reuter.

"NEXT MEETING IN TOKIO."

"NEXT METING IN TOKIO."

Toxio, Tuesdays—Discussing the prospects of peace, the "Jiji Shimpo" to-day says: "Should the peace negotiations fail the responsibility will rest with Russia and not with Japan. If the Russians refuse to accept our terms it would be advisable for our delegates to withdraw and to tell them that the next meeting will take place in Tokio."—Reuter's Special Service.

It is announced from Moscow that the subscriptions to the new internal Russian 5 per cent, loan of £20,000,000 have so far been very unsatisfactory, only £20,000 having been applied for,

GERMAN MASSACRE.

Shot Down on the Frontier.

GRAVE INCIDENT.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Tuesday,-No little sensation has been aused here by a remarkable story, for which the Eclair" is responsible, of French soldiers having been massacred by German troops at Missum Missum, on the Franco-German frontier in West Missum, on the Franco-German fronters.

Africa.

Africa.

The report, which has given rise to considerable disquietude and comment in diplomatic circles, is based on a report from the Colonial Administrator, M. Roussaire, dated May 9.

In this it is alleged that German troops, under Lieutenant Schaumann, drew the French soldiers into an ambuscade and then massacred them with-into an ambuscade and then massacred them without mercy.

In the course of a scathing editorial the "Eclair" refers to the more or less evident part played in the affair by Colonel Thys, the real inspirer of Belgian Imperialism in the Congo.

Reuter says that it was certainly not the German Government which caused Lieutenant Schaumann, to fire on the French native sharpshooters. Responsibility for the act must, it is declared, fall on the South Cameroon Company and Colonel Thys, of Brussels, vice-president and administrator of the society.

It is supposed that the body is that of a Dr.

It is supposed that the body is that of a Dr. Haller, of Berne, who, with two guides, disappeared about twenty-five years ago while on a tour from the Grimsel Pass to Grindelwald, and of whom nothing was subsequently heard.—Reuter. While endeavouring to lower himself by a rope down a precipitous crag near the Schlern, says a Reuter's Innabruck telegram, a private of the 2nd Field Jaeger Battalion fell a terrible distance and was dashed to pieces. Two other fatalities are also reported from Innsbruck.

Notable among his London works are the Natural History Museum at South Kensington, the University College Hospital, St. Paul's School, the Prudential Assurance Company's several offices, and the National Liberal Club.

One of the most cherished aims of Mr. Waterhouse's life was to "check the practice-of disfiguring public buildings and the natural beauties of the country by hideous advertisements."

He was the head and front, several years ago, of a movement which accomplished considerable good in this direction—doing no little, for example, towards the abolition of the once ubiquitious "skysign."

Channel Fleet were entertained yesterday by the Mayor of Ribe, Denmark, at a luncheon attended by prominent persons, says Reuter.
Responding to the toast of the British Navy, Admiral Neville said the ties between Denmark and Britain were intimate. Britain had received Queen Alexandra from Denmark, and he might say the Queen was the most popular lady in the whole world.
H.M. cruiser Sapphire and eleven torpedo-boat destroyers arrived from Ymuiden during Monday night, and joined the Channel Fleet off Graa Dyb. The destroyers coaled in Esbjerg Harbour yesterday morning from British colliers.

The same agency states from Ponta Delgada, in the Azores, that his Majesty's battleships King Edward VII., New Zealand, and Commonwealth, with the repair ship Assistance, arrived there yes-terday. The town was decorated and great fes-tivities have been arranged in honour of the fleet. There were illuminations last night.

PRINCE OF CRIME.

Romantic Life Passed in Persistent Law-Breaking.

"BEWILDERED BY FATE."

An auful remance of crime-the life story of a man who, blending desperate law-breaking with a tender love of scholarship—has just terminated by the execution at Toowong (Queensland), for murder, of James Warton.

murder, of James Warton.

His career, published at length by the Sydney "Sunday Times," marks him out as being one of the most remarkable criminals who have ever come under the notice of the courts.

Warton, who was fifty-seven years of age, had half a dozen aliases. His sentences ran to fifty-two years in New Zealand and Australia, forty-two years of which he served.

Going to Victoria from Ireland when he was seven years of age, Warton made the acquaintance of Pentridge Gaol when he was ten.

By the time he had been in the colony sixteen years his record showed sentences for vagrancy, larceny, robbery under arms, and burglary, totaling thirteen years.

GAOL AS COLLEGE.

In gaol he industriously set about educating him-self. He read widely, and specially studied music and history. The lives of Frederick the Great and Napoleon enthralled him, and no detail concern-ing them was too small for him to seize upon with ing them was too small for him to seize upon with avidity.

He also became an expert in shorthand, and was for a time a journalist.

Then he went to New Zealand, where, but for his irresistible penchant for a criminal career, he might have won distinction in an honest walk of life. He became a schoolmaster at a mining centre, and his advertisement, inserted in the local paper, has been brought to light. This led to his engagement by a Roman Catholic priest to conduct classes. These he continued to preside over for a while, but he ended in robbing his employer of £40.

Going to Dunedin, he showed large religious tolerance by attending the Sunday-school and teaching Scripture in it to Protestant children.

On the night of the same day that he gave religious instruction he robbed the house of Bishop Moran. He duly appeared before the Criminal court, charged with the robbery, and also with breaking and entering one of the Dunedin theatres and stealing whiskers, "make-up," and other theatrical properties.

In his address to the jury, which lasted six hours, Warton ridiculed the old saw, "Murder will out." When the jury was out Warton remarked that a disagreement was certain. One of the jurymen parted his hair in the middle. "And," observed the incorrigible criminal, "all men who part their hair down the middle are fools. I know I have convinced that one." He got off.

At the Queensland murder trial Warton made a dramatic address to the jury, and succeeded in getting a verdict of murder, instead of wilful murder, returned. In the course of his address he exclaimed passionately:—

BREAKFAST

Rise in Prices Means Spending £5.000.000 a Year.

THE DEAR RASHER.

If the shief articles found upon the breakfast table maintain their present value for swelve months it will mean that at the end of a year the inhabitants of the United Kingdom will have spent nearly 25,000,000 more on their breakfasts than they did in the previous year.

That, in a few words, is the meaning of a penny rise in the price of a pound of butter and the price of a pound of butter and the price of a pound of bacon. It does not include the rise in sardines and Canadian cheese.

During the year 1904 we imported and ate :-

6,583,053cwt. of bacon and ham.
4,154,339cwt. of butten
188,667cwt. of sardines.
2,647,447cwt. of cheese.

The money spent in foreign countries and the Colonies on these articles, and the amount eaten per head of the population, is estimated as

101/5.	Value.	n per hea	d
Bacon and ham	£15,937,141	17.2316. 10.871b.
Butter	£21,117,162 £505,872	10.0710.
Sardines	£5,849,770	6.821b.

If we cat the same quantity this year, and the price remains as it is at present, we shall spend, on an average, something like three-farthings more on each pound of bacon and ham, or £2,200,000 altogether.

£2,500,000 More in Butter.

#22,500,000 More in Butter.

Butter is a still more serious item, for while more is eaten every year, the rise in price is at least 1d. The increased cost of our butter, then, may be estimated at £2,500,000.

Sardines, which cost us £505,872 last year, are from 1d. to 2d. dearer, so that the extra sum expended upon this luxury will be something like £100,000.

The cheese figures are more difficult to use as a The cheese ingures are more difficult to use as a basis of calculation, because it is only eratinal varieties of cheese that are dearer, but it may be reckoned that unless prices fall we shall spend $759,000 more upon this article of food.

This, then, is the meaning of the "breakfast-table rise."

£2,200,000 more in bacon and ham. £2,500,000 more in butter. £106,009 more in sardnes. £750,000 more in cheese.

While the rise lasts, then, we are spending £100,000 a week more on food than we have been doing for some time.

Consolation in Tea

Consolation in Tea.

Fortunately tea has fallen 2d. a pound—thanks to the Chancellor of the Exchequer—and we are therefore paying about £50,000 a week less than we should have been paying had the rise in butter, cheese, and bacon been experienced befose the tea duty was made smaller.

For millions of people the present price of food is a most serious thing, for the very poorest practically live on tea, bread, butter, and bacon. It means that, half-starved as they are, they will have to eat still less.

Among the reasons given for the rise in food are the following:

Butter-Increase in consumption; falling-off in Siberian supply because of the war; drought in Miss Kellermann's Final Practice Swim Off Dover.

READY TO START TO-DAY.

Phere were disconsolate faces in Dover at 2.30 vesterday morning, when two out of the five Channel swimmers were timed to set off on their long journey.

A hard, south-westerly wind was blowing through the darkness, and a heavy sea running. To add to the cold was penetratingly keen, and fit and ready though the swimmers were to try their luck, it was-apparent that the weather was altogether unforourable

When day broke the first to greet the wind and sea was Miss Annette Kellermann, the pheky young Australias gid, who will attempt this herculean feat of swimming from England to France for the Daish Mirror toophy. Without bat, with her brown hair blowing about her face, she walked down the beach just after seven o'eldek." We's blowing," she said cheerfully. "I suppose the others couldn't go this moning." She sympathised with them. "Well, we'll all go together," said this charming girl with a smile, "and we'll race there."

HUSSAR CAPTAIN'S TOVE STORY.

Remarkable Sequel to a Liaison of Coino

UNFOUNDED CHARGE.

An officer's love story in Cairo had a singular sequel yesterday in London. At the Westminster Police Court Captain Thomas William Whiffen, of the 14th Hussars, giving his address as "Oldwick," Sussex, was charged with impropriety with a little girl of fourteen, named Louise Adams, in a first-girl of fourteen, named Louise Adams, in a first-class carriage on the District Railway.

It was a singular story that was revealed in the statement for the prosecution. Mrs. Adams, the girl's mother, til recently lived in fairs, and there met Captain Whiften and other British officers. She was married, but she fell in love, according to her own story, with the captain, and shared his life with him.

In July she came to England with her daughter, met Captaen Whiffen, and went about with him.

A Stranga Story

A Strange Story.

The little girl, who was nicely dressed, pretty, and self-possessed, gave her account of what happened on Monday afternson. The captain met her and her mother at Victoria Station, and whilst her mother was away he sæggested that they should, have a ride to Charing Cross on the District Raitway.

It was this ride in an empty carriage that gaverise to the charge.

The captain and the girl went together as far as Temple Station, and walked back to Charing Cross, where the mether mother.

The girl said she told her mother part of the story during a momentary absence of the captain, and the remainder during a visit the three paid to Earl's Court Exhibition in the evening. They all dined together at Victoria, and late at night the mother lodged a charge at Westminster Police Station.

CURIOUS DEVELOPMENT.

"I am perfectly certain of what I state. It is a gross fraud," stated Major Apthorp, at Bow street, yesterday, when being bound over to prose cute at the sessions under the Vevatious Indict. mente Act

The major resorted to this course because Mr. Marsham dismissed a summons he had brought against Sydney Georgia Annette Scrope Heaton, otherwise Ferrers for committing periusy in an action for breach of promise in which he was ordered to pay her £1,350 damages.

It was explained that the breach of pramise action was heard in March last year. An appeal against that finding was subsequently dismissed with costs. At the last hearing of this summons it was stated that the defendant, in reply to ker counsel, stated that she was the daughter of "the late" Mr. Ferrers, but her father was now alive. It was Ferrers, but her father was now alive. It was further suggested that she was a married woman at the time she brought the action, and the summons was adjourned for evidence on that point. Mr. Burnett now said that he proposed to put the defendant's father into the witness-box. Mr. Marsham: That is not the point at issue. I cannot sommit the defendant unless it is proved, that she was a married woman at the time she brought her action.

CHANGE OF WORK THE BEST HOLIDAY.

Views of Well-known Artist, Novellst, and Song Writer.

TO FIGHT MONOTONY.

From the many letters which reach us on the subject of holidays we print the following:-

Mr LESLIE WARD, the famous caricaturist of " Vanity Fair":-

In the sea, on the sea, and by the sea, is my idea of the best kind of holiday.

LESLIE WARD.

Mrs. OSCAR BERINGER, the well-known novelist and playwright :-

A holiday should cater for the refreshment of the soul as well as of the body, and if the soul of the strengous worker reaches the same point of collapse as his physical forces, and they generally run side by side, the onus of prescription becomes doubly onerous.

There is also no doubt that holiday should be taken from doing nothing, and enjoyed in regular interesting work—preferably for others.

taken from doing nothing, and enjoyed in regular interesting work—preferably for others.

There is little danger, at the present writing, of Jack's working until he is a dull boy. The expession "having a good time," which has come over to us from America, is conscientiously illustrated on every available opportunity.

But to fight the Demon Monotony successfully a radical change of scene, air, surrounding, and, when possible, country, may be advised as primary ingredients of a holiday recipe. It all, I think, resolves itself into change—change—change.

No rich man whose time is his own, who hasnever suffocated soul and body within the sickening round of routine for, say, 350 days of the year, can realise for a single fraction of a moment what it means to a poor man to wake up on the first morning of his holiday and to remember the joys which lie before him.

In such moments as these lie the compensations which render most fates fairly equal, and which make each man the best prescribing physician for his own holiday.

Headley, Hants.

his own holiday. Headley, Hants.

Mr. WALTER CRANE, the distinguished artist:

You ask for my opinion on the best kind of holiday. I should say it depended upon the character of a man or a woman's ordinary life and employments.

Work is the best holiday for the idle—especially

Work is the complexity the computering with a computering the computering the computering with a complexity control of the complexity with the complexity control of it.

I do not think that the modern holiday system of carting humanity wholesale from one place to another necessarily secures a pleasant holiday

Change, however, is the first ingredient of a holi-y. Change of air, scene, occupation—possibly companions! Civilised life is only tolerable in proportion to the number and accessibility of the means of escape from it, but the component elements of "a good time" vary so much according to character and circumstances that they cannot be defined. WALTER CRANE.

Mr. CLIFTON BINGHAM, the well-known songwriter : -

That you should solicit my opinion on this subject is quaint, as I have not taken what might be called a "set" holiday for twenty years.

A mad fortnight or more, at a crowded seaside resort, with forty-eight hours' "ush" rammed into every twelve; hurry and bustle and heat and discomfort—this is not my translation of the word "holiday," be a man's business or profession what

A Bank Holiday is my pet abomination; fourteen of them consecutively would send me crazy. But of course, one man's fish is another man'

My idea of the best holiday is "a rest"; but when I go for a brief week-end, I am not able to adopt my own prescription, as I cannot leave my "capacity for thinking" behind me.

Were I to take a fortnight's "rest" I should most likely to do more brain work during it than I should in town. But even this would not do me such harm as would trying to climb a foot higher than tae last fool up a Swiss mountain, or see more "sights" in a day than anyone else had ever seen in two!

CLIFTON BINGHAM.

"Another City Man" hits the nail on the head, does he not, when he says "short and often"? Look at the rush on Bank Holidays; how often you hear it said, "It's no enjoyment, it's slavery," hot, crowded trains, and crowled resorts, you come backgmore tired than you went, and think that the money might easily have been better spent.

SUNDAY TRADING.

Lords' Select Committee on Come pulsory Glosing.

Most interesting facts are contained in the report of the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the Sunday Closing of Shops, issued yesterday as a Disa histole

The Committee state their general conclusion

The Committee state their general conclusion thus:—

"The Committee are convinced by the evidence that Sunday trading is on the increase; that the Bill is urgently needed; that it is desired by the shopkeeping interests, and would inflict no serious hardship on the poorer classes; that it would be a great benefit to the country generally, and that it commends itself both to the reason and the conscience of the community."

It appears that over 300 shopkeepers' associations, sounded by the Committee on the subject, are in favour of a Sunday Closing Bill. Bakers, butchers, dairymen, drapers, grocers, and hair-dressers were overwhelmingly in its favour.

The majority of winnesse expressed a strong opinion that the public would suffer no serious inconvenience if such a Bill became law. They also state that in their opinion the opening of shops on Sunday is on the increase, and that there is a serious danger that it will become the rule for shops to be open, at any rate, on Sunday morning unless a Closing Bill is passed.

Corporations and urban district councils everywhere are in favour of Sunday closing.

The chief opponents are the Hebrew community, the costermongers, who do a large and profitable business on Sundays, and the Dock Labourers' Union, who oppose Sunday closing on the ground mainly that a great hardship would be entailed if it were made impossible for dock labourers to obtain refreshments after nine o'clock in the morning.

obtain refreshments after nine o'clock in the morning.

Striking evidence was given by Mr. Douglas Eyre, vice-head of Oxford House, Bethnal Green. He says concerning "Petticoat-lane," "the conditions which exist in our neighbourhood have a most demoralising effect upon the population, because it is not merely Sunday trading, but it has developed into a regular Sunday fair; wherever this concourse is gathered together there you get the professional gamblers and other people."

CONSOLS DROOP AGAIN.

Stock Exchange Fears Peace Negotiations Will End in Fiasco.

End in Fiasco.

CAPEL COURT, Tuesday Evening.—The Stock Markets have been in a somewhat unhappy frame of mind on fears that the peace negotiations will end in a fiasco. Consols drooped to 904, and other gilt-edged securities were rather dull, ignoring cheap money conditions.

Home Rails were all out of favour, notably Great Easterns, on a traffic decrease of £43,000. The South-Eastern-Chatham increase of £3,020 was not bad, but Dover "A" drooped, and, in fact, the whole market was in a rather despondent mood. American Rails succumbed to the general depression, for there was nothing very encouraging in overnight advices from the other side, and New York did not give much support in the afternoon. Japanese bonds relapsed on fears of an unfavourable termination of the Peace Conference. The new scrip fell to 4-premium, but railied to 1 3-16 premium on the news that the Conference apostoned till to-morrow. Russians also declined, and other inter-Bourse favourities fell away in sympathy. Copper shares weakened, and Peruvians were sold. Brazilian Government securities also reacted after their recent strength.

In the Miscellaneous group Chinese descriptions, such as Pekin Syndicates and Shansis fell away, for if the peace negotiations come to nothing, it will adversely affect these concerns. Dock stocks were bought, and Hudson Bays were rather bid for. Anglo A were sold to secure profits.

"EDUCATED" UNEMPLOYED.

HE unemployed of the labouring class are with us now, summer as well as winter, and will be until the conditions which create them are altered. Of the educated unemployed we do not generally hear so much, though one knows there are plenty of them. Just lately, however, attention has been drawn several times to their unhappy

For instance, a man who was formerly a clerk in the Education Office has just killed himself because he could not get work at a desk and could not do manual labour. There would have been a touching outburst of sympathy if it had not been shown that the cause would have been a touching outburst of sympathy if it had not been shown that the cause of the disaster was—drink.

Then the other day there was published a letter from a man of forty, who described himself as belonging to the "well-bred, well-educated, well-travelled, much experienced" class, and who neither has work nor sees any prospect of obtaining any.

Apparently he had been connected with the "unique nature of this business unfitting a man for any other." It has clearly had this effect upon him. He has been engaged for two years past, since he lost his job, in answering advertisements! That is his only idea, except that he would, if he could, advertise for a situation himself!!

Now this kind of man is bound to be a failure, unless by some lucky chance he happened to fall into a situation where he could go on working away steadily without any enterprise or initiative for the rest of his life. The depressing thing to think of is that there are such an enormous number of this kind of man about.

are such an enormous number of this kind of man about.

Nothing astonishes an American more than to see how tenaciously people in this country cling to their jobs. The idea of losing them sends a cold shudder down their backs. They turn pale at the thought. It is a pitful confession of their own unfitness to fight the battle turn pale at the thought. It is a pitiful confession of their own unfitness to fight the battle of life.

The typical English father, when he puts his son into a bank or a business, says to him, "Now, my boy, you have your chance to settle down for life, and I hope you'll end your days as you begin them. Never forget that you have got something safe, if it isn't brilliant, or that, if you give this up, you'll probably never find anything else."

The typical American parent, on the other hand, says, "Well, give it a trial. If you don't feel happy, try something else."

The typical American parent, on the other hand, says, "Well, give it a trial. If you don't feel happy, try something else. A man who's worth his keep can always earn it. Bear that in mind, and recollect you've only got one life. Make the best of it."

Many voices will be raised at once declaring in chorus that, whatever may be the case in America, an "educated" man who loses his job here has to wait a long time before he gets another. That is true enough, and why is it? Because, as a rule, he can do nothing but the simplest clerk work, and that not very well.

When a young Englishman leaves school he regards his days of acquiring knowledge as over. He has not got to bother about learning any more. The consequence is, seeing he has learnt next to nothing at school, that he never knows more than "next to nothing all his life.

Every man who wants to face the future with a stout heart ought to be master of at least one alternative trade or occupation to that in which he is engaged. Even with that, he still needs energy and onterprise to keep the wolf from the door in bad times.

Self-reliance is what our schools ought to try to instil into the rising generation. If the "educated unemployed" had more self-reliance and the labouring unemployed were not so fond of drink, there would be fewer of both and we should all be better off.

THIS MORNINGS GOSSIP

LMOST every day during the last few weeks there has been a motor acci with more or less serious results, either in England or America. The latest is that which has wrought have amongst the horses of the Warwick shire Hunt. Lord Willoughby de Broke, who is master of the Hunt, comes of a famous sporting family. His father, who died only in 1902, held the namly. His father, who died only in 1902, held the mastership of the Warwickshire Hounds for twenty years, and his son was at once appointed to succeed him when he died. The lale Lord Willoughby had, as perhaps most efficient fox-hunters must have, a ready command of an explosive vocabulary, which he used against inexpert huntsmen with great effect.

The present peer is quite as keen a sportsman as his father. He is a capital ride shot, and a fisherman of great experience. His family has, by the way, been curiously unbuck in the way of domestic bereavement. Lord. Willoughly's mother, died some ten years ago while still young. His younger brother was drowned out in India, and his sister was soon afterwards overcome by a kind of fit.

Two very interesting birthdays to-day are those of Admiral Lord John Hay, who is seventy-cight, and General Sir Frederick Carrington, who is sixty-one. It is wonderful to think that Lord John Hay went to sea when Queen Victoria had only been two years on the throne, that he served in the distant China war at fifteen, and was before Sebastopol with the fleet at twenty-seven. He retired in 1888 after nearly fifty years of the most active service imaginable. He has also had a considerable parliamentary experience, and has chronicled, in the volume of memoirs he published some years ago, a few of the annusing bons most he picked up during his legislative experience.

One of these is attributed to O'Connell, the Parnell of Lord John Hay's earlier days in the House. O'Connell making a flowery little speech about a respectable member for Berkshire, who had remained alone, out of a considerable band which had just gone over from Lord Melbourne to Sir Robert Peel, alluded to him as the "last rose of summer left blooming alone." "O'Connell," said a friend to the speaker afterwards, "how could you compare that old fellow to a rose?" "Oh," replied O'Connell in his of one of the officers taking part in the recent manœuvres who saw a pensant woman most unmercifully thrashing a cat. He went up to her, and remarked, "You seem to be beating that yery severely," when she turned round, with an ugly grin, and remarked, "Not half the beating the Boers gave you in South Africa."

Boers gave you in South Africa."

Even in Dublin there exists among certain classes a strong feeling against the military element. The committee of the late tournament in Dublin invited the children of one of the orphanages to be present on the rehearsal day, but the authorities of the school snubbed the committee by replying they could not consent to children under their charge being present at the performance, as it was given by British soldiers.

OUR DECLINING BIRTH-RATE.

The attention evoked by the recently published quarterly report of the Registrar-General of births, deaths, and marriages, shows that the nation is fully alive to the dangers of a declining birth-rate. One contributing factor is the increasing difficulty which poor mothers find in looking after their infant children.

which poor mouners and in looking after their infant children.

Frequently while the mother is engaged from home in earning those children's bread the children are in inexperienced or careless hands, and the mother is often haunted by anxiety as to what is happening to them. For the poor this problem of the care of infant children is one of the most serious difficulties of marriage.

To meet that difficulty my society is strongly of opinion that day nurseries should be provided throughout our large cities. In these nurseries the children could be properly tended, washed and fed, and the mother could thus be relieved of much of her anxiety.

THE FAILURE OF SCIENCE.

THE FAILURE OF SCIENCE.

May I suggest that the aim of science is to discover how the universe at large works; to discover what has happened (geology and astronomy); what does happen (chemistry, physics, biology, etc.); and, so far as fixed sequences of events can be determined, to discover what is likely to happen.

If these things can be ascertained a certain amount of control can be established over Nature. The earth may be made to support a larger population. The comfort of this population can be increased by the telephones, etc., mentioned by "H. H. F.", and their misery may be decreased by improved medicine and surgery.

However anti-Christians may quote scientific discoveries against religion, true scientists are fully occupied in following truth, regardless where it may lead them.

EARRINGS GOOD FOR THE SIGHT.

EARRINGS GOOD FOR THE SIGHT.

The sweeping statements of "Common Sense" amuse me. To assert that people of refinement must be repulsed at the idea of mutilating the ears is absurd. People in the highest society (even our Queen) wear these "seaseless ornaments," and I think it may safely be said that they are very becoming to a pretty woman. As to being beneficial to the sight, I know several doctors who advocate wearing them, and the reason they are so frequently worm by men-organ-grinders and foreigners—is to preserve their sight.

BOARD SCHOOLS AND BAD MANNERS.

Where can the children of to-day learn good manners?

At the Board schools a great many of the teachers require teaching good manners themselves.
My experience of twenty-five years ago is that the elementary schools of that time had sensible men and women to teach children good manners, and to set the good example themselves.

The most interesting wedding to take place today is that of Miss Muriel Duke and Mr. George Lord Dundonald and the son of Lady Aice Newton. Lord Dundonald's family name, which Mr.

in the seventeenth century the last of the Cochranes, younger son of the old Blair family from the county of Ayr. The heiress's husband, according to an approved custom, took his wife's name and arms,

From my experience I judge that the girls of to-day are far different in all respects to what the girls of thirty or forty years ago were.

At the present time the majority of the young At the present time the majority of the young women prefer warehouse or factory work to service, as they can have the evenings out to flaunt about the streets, visit music-halls or theatres, dress in showy style, wear cheap jewellery, and generally spend their time in "showing off," while numbers of them do not know how to prepare a meal, mend their garments, or keep a room tidy. Therefore it cannot be wondered at that young men are afraid to take wives, and prefer to remain single. Their income would fail to koep pace with this mode of life.

A DEFENCE OF THE BUSINESS GIRL.

A DEFENCE OF THE BUSINESS GIRL.

I am a business girl, and I venture to assert that fit will be my greatest joy to be a "help" in every sense of the word to my husband.

It does not follow that because a girl is obliged to turn out and earn her own living and rough it, so to speak, in the business world that her love for home and domestic duties is lessened; on the contarry, if she be a true woman, it is intensified, for she has seen the harder side of life, and longs more for her own real atmosphere. Not only so, but the business girl will have more practical sympathy with her husband on business matters than will the girl with no business experience whatever, who often saya to her husband, "Oh! don't bother me with your business worries."

MAN PROPOSES.

MAN PROPOSES.

None of your correspondents, so far as I have noticed, seem to take into consideration the fact that, in all cases of married happiness or unhappiness, it is the man who, in the first instance, is necessarily responsible. Why?

Simply because it is the man who chooses. He proposes to a girl, selects her from others of his acquaintance, persuades her, if she happen to be diffident (which is, I must admit, exceedingly rare nowadays), and generally plans the campaign.

Then, after the irreparable step is taken, the man begins his complaints, forgetting that he has brought trouble upon himself. If a man does not believe in women, he has only not to ask one of them to marry him.

Practical.

"ONLY GENERAL SERVANTS."

I thought the Japanese letter very good, and gree that the majority of men are decidedly big children.

In the working classes, for instance, the wives of most men are really only general servants, and without even the small amount of liberty enjoyed by that much-enduring individual.

In the upper classes the cage is gilded; but in both ranks of life the world has small pity for the bird who flies from either plain or decorated prison, however blamable may be the captor.

O'HANCI SAN.

TACT, THE VIRTUE WANTED.

If a man has any true affection for the woman he has chosen for a life-partner, he must be prepared to help her with loving patience and sympathy. It is unfair to expect a girl to undertake the arduous duties of wife and mother unless she has a considerate and sympathetic husband.

Most of the misery in married life is brought about by the absence of tate in treating the petty faults of a hasty-tempered husband or a wife inclined to grumble.

Being only young and foolish I am perhaps hardly in a position to judge, but one might remark in passing if one wife is a hindrance, what would ten be?

Sabra looked at the small, burly, bearded man with a rather shocked expression on her face.

"Oh, Dr. Mortimer, that is a very hard word," she exclaimed.

"Not a bit too hard," he answered, with a touch of actual fierceness in his pleasant voice, which would have told even a stranger that he had touched on a subject on which the little man felt strongly. Sabra knew it well enough, for she had listened to many furious diatribes on the evil of the system that permitted this institution that her aunt had founded. "I call it an accursed place," he went on, "because everything is accursed to me that sagainst Nature. And what could be more against Nature than the spectacle of a lot of women, most of them young and pretty and rich women, shutting themselves up in this place and letting their whole natures, body and brain, run to waste? It's an ugly and a marbid and an unnatural thing, Miss Sabra, to shirk one's responsibilities; and escape one's vocation, and to give nothing in exchange for the privilege of life."

The girl shook her head doubtfully.
"I can't argue with you, Dr. Mortimer." she said, "but I think you're a little bit unfair. After all, they do good; they're very kind to the poor all about here, and even you will admit that at the Settlement in the slums they do good ownk."
"Not more than any vicar's wife who brings up her five or six sturdy brats besides," the little doctor answered doggedly, "and doesn't make any for six should be supply that the six of the supply of the womand-dotor finds periodice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fail of prejudice on the subject, and never minced fails, Miss Sabra. The doctor's manner changed entirely. His voice dropped from the loud, half-humorous, half-aggressive tones, in which he had proclaimed his point of view, to an almost preternatural gravity. "You're not going to marry Mr. Dick? But why—why? No, I can't believe that, Miss Sabra." "But it's only a couple of days ago I was congratulating you both, and thinking that you were my ideal pair of lovers!"

The doctor's voice was almost piteous. "I have changed my mind," said Sabra. "But are you sure, Miss Sabra? Try not to look upon me as a meddling, prying, old fool! Isn't it some lover's quarrel?"

"No, Dr. Mortimer, it's something quite different. I found that—that I had made a mistake." "I'm sorry," said the doctor, with simple gravity. "I'm sorry," said the assert for me."

"I'm sorry," said the doctor, with simple gravity. "I'm sorry, said the sizer for me."

"I'm sorry," said the sizer for me."

"Yes, I am; quite, quite sure."

"And so you are going to do the time-honoured thing, and take to working among the poor as a salve to a—"

Sabra held out her hand appealingly. It was a quiet action, but it had a strangely helpless air, like a gesture made by a woman who is blind. "Please don't jest, Dr. Mortimer answered," and I can think of none that I would give more unwillingly. But if you are so sorry about anything in my life. And a dreadful thought oppresses me. Is it possible that you mean eventually to come here to do as your aunt has always wished?"

Sabra's face had put on that white, rigid look, so new to it, so forbidding, and, at the same time, so pathetic. Calmly she broke in upon the torrential flow of the little doctor's speed.

"I am not going to marry Mr. Dangerville, after all," she said. "And I am going to work for a little while at the Settlement. I feel I should like she said. "You and my aunt are like counsel on

Dr. Mortimer muttered angrily to himself. He Ursula in hers, and, like her, he was overwhelmingly sincere.

When he was near the Abbey he stood still and looked back, watching Sabra's erect, slender young form pass through the great gates.

"There goes a creature as near my ideal woman as any I've seen," he said to himself with rueful fervour, "beauty and braius and sympathy and perfect balance. If they get her into this place in the end, I shall feel inclined to set fire to it and watch it burn to the ground."

And, being in an unusually impulsive mood, as he turned again towards the Abbey he shook his fist at the grey and peaceful pile.

CHAPTER XIII.

" A little treacherous thought came creeping in."

"A little treacherous thought came creeping in."

The days that followed Sabra's desertion were such that Dick Dangerville never in all his life looked back on them without a shudder.

Lord Blanquart recovered his bodily strength with almost amazing rapidity, considering his age, but his mind remained plunged in a black apathy from which nothing could rouse it. The moment of weakness in which he had impored his son to accept the week's further grace offered by Swindover was never again referred to between father and son. For six out of the eight days the hated name did not pass their lips, although it hung, like a great vampire shadow, over their lives, draining the earth of sunshine, the world of beauty.

Meanwhile, Dick had made all preparations for their departure, and superintended daily a portion of the packing of their personal belongings. Most of the day he spent in wandering about the country-side, of which almost every tree and fence had some association with his boyhood's pleasures, his young manhood's ambitions and desires and hopes. His father did not move out of the restricted grounds (Continued on page 11.)

IS THERE A SPIRIT WORLD?

THE FUTURE FORESEEN.

The majority of the letters received still contain concrete evidence in favour of a disembodied life. Several curious incidents are faithfully told in the selection which follows:

"AS IN A GLASS, DARKLY."

"AS IN A GLASS, DARKLY."

To sum up shortly some of my experiences, I may say that I can often see when a person is marked for death. One instance was a friend who was an immediate colleague of mine, who only complained of feeling casually unwell. I noticed a greyish hue (a sort of fog) surrounding his head and face, and I begged him to go home and have the best medical advice. In two days he was dangerously ill, and in five he was dead.

At 3 a.m. on the morning he died (which I found out afterwards was the exact time he did die) he appeared to me as a spirit from the departed.

Again, I was living hetween Deal and Walmon.

parted.
Again, I was living between Deal and Walmer some years ago, when the Dolphin passenger steamer was run into by another steamer and sunk. V. I saw the collision two days before it happened, but attributed it only to nightmate. However, I recounted the whole thing to my landlady the anext morning, and as she is living now she could bear witness to the correctness of all the details I gave her two days before the accident happened.

details I gave her two days before the accident hap-pened.

Again, many years ago, I called at my brother's house to inquire after his health. I got as far as the mat in the hall, but could set no further. My limbs seemed transfixed to the floor, and the whole of the hall was converted into a cemetery, where I and his wife and other relatives stood beside an open grave, into which my brother's coffin was being lowered.

a minute.

A MYSTERIOUS VISIT.

A MYSTERIOUS VISIT.

Perhaps the following experience may be of interest to:"Thomas Dubitans."

Many years ago I was in Yorkshire taking charge of a doctor's practice during his absence. Among his patients was one I had to visit frequently.

She was a young woman, a schoolinistress, I think, who had been confined to her bed for some three years or so, owing to an obscure complaint which I now think was hysteria.

After some weeks I returned to town, and forgot all about her.

Some months later I was disturbed at night by a female who came to my bedside. I awoke with my heart thumping violently.

The person then moved to the foot of the bed and looked at me. And I stared at her.

It was the same young woman I had seen in Yorkshire. She did not speak, but her eyes, which seemed to be very brilliant, told me as plainly as speech that she had come to thank me for what I had done for her, and to say good-bye.

She then faded away through the window facing me.

IN THE HOUR OF DEATH.

IN THE HOUR OF DEATH.

I was once on a visit to some friends at a beautiful spot among the Cleveland hills, Yorkshire. While I was there a sister of my host was taken ill in Scotland, and his wife went off to her.

A few days after he was taking his usual napsitting in his big armchair, with a silk handkerchief over his face—his daughter and I sitting heside him sewing—when he suddenly pulled the handkerchief from his face and started up, saying, "Annie, where are you?"

We got quite a fright, and asked him what he meand said, "George, you have been so good to me, but I am safely over now," or some words to that effect.

In half an hour from that moment a wire came that his sister had really passed away.

of Dangerville Hall. He sat chiefly in his study, a statuesque figure of infinite pathos, immersed in the bitterest and blackest thoughts that can torture the mind of man.

Of Sabra, also, they never spoke. Dick had told his father briefly that he had put her for ever out of his life and heart, and that, if she came and begged him on her knees, he would not take her back. Her letter was not only cruel, it was a piece of the basest treachery, and treachery was a thing one could not forgive.

So the two men spent the last days that remained to them in the last remnant of their once splendid possessions, of which disaster, and, no doubt, a little folly, and a vast amount of incompetence, had robbed them. They spent these days moodily, hardly speaking to each other, each one eating his heart out in silence.

To the young man it was a terrible wrench, a bitter and hateful degradation, a catastrophe that he could not help looking on as an injustice; but to Blanquart de Balliol, with his heart deep-rooted in the soil, it was an agony that it would be impossible in human words to describe.

He never regained the proud poise of his head, the indescribable look of greatness and splendour that had characterised him. He sat always huddled up now, with his eyes staring straight into space, where he saw endless visions, each one bitter as death.

But the bitterest thing of all was when one tiny death.

But the bitterest thing of all was when one tiny thought, an infinitesimal thing, a speck, came there for a second, before it was furiously and shudderingly expelled.

The strange thing was that Dick, through some inexplicable psychical process, knew when that thought came into his father's mind, although Lord Blanquart would have died rather than speak it aloud. Dick knew just how his father felt, how he hated and despised himself, and would have taken his own life with his own hands. if the spilling of his blood could have wiped out the fact that that infinitesimal speck of a thought had, for a second of time, found a lodging in his brain.

As was only natural, Dick found that this thought began from time to time to creep into his own brain, and, although he expelled it just as violently as his father had done, it came again and again, and each time it remained for a longer space. But it was not Dick's thought at all, it was the reflection of his father's thought. Alone, he would never have entertained it for a second. He would have laughed it away, which is the easiest method of getting rid of a troublesome thought.

But, as it was, and he saw his father growing every day more careworn and haggard, and sinking ever more completely into the apathetic and brooding ghost of a man, with the horror of the approaching severance making his old eyes every day brighter and more terrible, the thought grew more and more insistent, until it became the young man's constant and abhorrent companion, that he could not shake off, try as he would.

Then, once father and son happened to look at each other, and each saw the thought looking out of the other's eyes.

out of the other's eyes.

They tried to go on as if nothing had happened, and the whole day was a ghastly succession of unending silences broken by a few stereotyped absurd, and meaningless words.

The time had come when they could not look each other in the face for fear of seeing this speek, this infinitesimal thing, that had grown to be a monster—this terrible, implacable, all-pervading

BRAIN EXHAUSTION

The nature of the trouble and the right treatment for its cure. How full nerve and brain power is regained by the use of Bishon's Tonules.

Bishop's Tonules.

There are many sufferers in this direction in these days of strain, stress, hurry, and effort. The brain becomes tired, worn out, wearied, and as a consequence mental effort of almost any kind becomes practically impossible. Teachers, composers, journalists, preachers, students, business men, and innumerable others all have at times actual personal experience of this painful condition. Work has to be done, a cessation of activity is practically impossible, and naturally there is a tendency to take any tonic or stimulant that promises to give relief and power to do a little more work. A general tonic of some kind is used, but does little or nothing to rebuild the exhausted nerves or brain, and if stimulants are taken they are positively injurious and lead to nervous breakdown or collapse.

THE STRAIN OF BUSINESS

THE STRAIN OF BUSINESS

There is no room in modern business life for the indolent, dull-brained, or steepy. Work has to be done at high pressure, and in a live office nowadays everyone, from the office boy to the principal, has to move quickly, or be left behind in the race. Hence there are cases of nervous breakdowns in every department, and more especially with those who have to think and plan, and on whose brain there is a perpetual strain.

THE TRUE CAUSE OF DRAIN EXHAUSTION

THE TRUE CAUSE OF DRAIN EXHAUSTION
What is really wrong in nervous and brain exhaustion is that the delicate nerve and brain tissue is worn down, and something is urgently needed that will replace the worn-away tissue with new matter and foster its growth. Is there such a remedy as we have here indicated? Is there such its growth? Is there anything that will take away those feelings of utter weariness, terrible exhaustion, fatigue, and want of energy and power? The answer to these questions is found below.

BISHOP'S TONULES

answer to these questions is found below.

BISHOP'S TONULES

are a combination of nerve-repairing elements, and their very composition enables them to provide mutrifion for nerve and brain. The great value of Bishop's Tonules sis that they nourish the nerves and completely rebuild them.

Bishop's Tonules supply the tissues with a vital element in an easily assimilable form, and as this element is a most important constituent of those cells which make up the brain and nerve substance, their value in nourishing brain and nerve will be readily understood. It is not pretended that immediately the first Tonule is taken-nerve restoration follows, as such a claim would be obviously false and absurd. In the very nature of the time, but if it be persevered with improvement is certain.

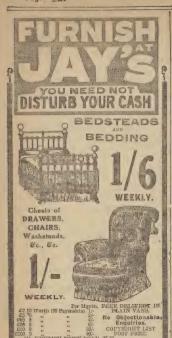

Under the influence of Bishop's Tonules the appetite improves, the converse of the convers

REMARKABLE TESTIMONY

A. W., New Cross, S.E., writes as follows: "I feel it my duty to let you know of the great benefit I have derived from Bishop's Tonules. I had been suffering severely for a long time from nervous and general debility, with anemia, neuralgia, and very poor appetite. My lips and face became a livid colour, and when I arose in the morning I felt as though I hadn't the strength to do anything. When I heard of Bishop's Tonules I decided to try them. After I had taken several doses my neuralgia disappeared, my appetite improved, and the colour came back to my lips and face, and I arose in the morning much brighter and fresher, having lost that heavy, sleepy feeling. I continued the treatment regularly, and day by day my condition improved. I owe my cure entirely to Bishop's Tonules, and shall ever be grateful."

DRESS-NOIIRISHING CHEESE. PRINCESS NEW ASPECT OF THE

A VALUABLE FOOD.

HOW NORFOLK NEW MILK CHEESE EG MADE

A good deal of interest has been aroused lately among travellers and those who are concerned in supplying emergency rations with regard to Irmtchek, the name given by the Khirgeses, of the Caspian Steppes, to the small, round cheese balls that form their chief food on the march. Three of these balls, weighing only two-fifths of an ounce, are said to provide sufficient sustenance for twentyfour hours for a man in ordinary health.

Though European cheese can claim no such highly-concentrated properties, it is very rich in preteids and energy-producing constituents, and thus is especially suited to those who from necescity or inclination cat little meat or lead an out door life. Indeed, it is a great misfortune that it is gradually being barished from the working man's table

What the Greaning Chasse Was.

Important, indeed, was the part cheese played in rural households in the century we have left behind us. The wedding breakfast and the funeral feast alike were sumished forth with this homely dainty. Oat-cake and cheese, or currant-bread and cheese, while the pièce de résistance at all rustic cheese, while the pièce de résistance at all rustic banquets, while the more epicurean townsman in-dulged in the delights of Welsh rabbit or mock crab. The groaning cheese was duly prepared before the birth of an infant, and was cut and dis-tributed among the guests at the christening feast, the girls keeping their portions to be employed like wedding-cake as a means of divining the future.

Appreciated in the Antipodes.

Appreciated in the Antipodes.

The appreciation of cheese—as of oatmeal porridge, another too much neglected article of diet —seems to have migrated from England to the Antipodes. In Australia the Sundowner, or professional beggar of the country districts, invariably requests to be supplied with cheese for his meal, and is extremely annoyed if put off with mere mutton, which in that country costs one quarter the price of chesse.

Throughout the north of Europe the food value of cheese is recognised, and cut in thin slices it invariably appears on the breakfast-table to conclude the meal.

variably appears on the breakfast-table to conclude the med.

The new millc-fleeses made in Norfolk, eaten with an accompanient of freshly-picked cresses or lettuce, form an ideal tunch for these who wish to dispense with the state of the second of the second dispense with the state of the second of the second than cream cheese, which contains only the fatty portions of the sailk, while they are less heating than ordinary cheese, and are thus better suited for a warm weather dist.

Cheese That Should Be Made Often.

Cheese That Should Be Made Often.

They are easily made, being composed of new milk warmed and "cracked" in the same way as for the preparation of Devonshire junket. The whey is strained from the curd, and the latter is broken up with a feek and slightly salted. Nerfolk housewires add a flavouring of mint, but this is not liked by all people. The curd is next tied up in a cheese cloth, and hung up to drain for twenty-four hours. At the end of this time it is pressed under weights and turned night and morning. It is ready for use in about three days, when it is of the consistency of cream cheese, but much whiter in colour. Turned carefully out of the cloth and sent to table with a garnish of salad, it is an excellent dish.

As these "soft" cheeses do not keep well after they are sut, they should be made quite small and at frequent intervals.

LINOLEUM ECONOMICALLY CLEANSED

Linoleum may be cleaned in this way. Take equal parts of olive oil and vinegar and rub the linoleum well with a soft filance. If treated in this way linoleum or oilculus will last twice as long as when it is washed with soap and water.

Onion pink is a new shade in gloves. It is delieate biscuit colour, with the faintest suggestion of pink in it.

Plain stockings or those with clocks or embroidery all in the same shade are liked better than contrasts in colour.

It is very assential that a petticoat should fit perfectly about the hips, for upon its shape depends largely the appearance of the outside skirt. Among the most serviceable skirts are those with alpacatops and silk flounces. Buffled or gauged flounces wear better than those what are pfeaded. A strong heavy Surah silk makes a good petticoat, while

The fact that the Queen lately received as a gift and wore a Japanese costume has caused Japanese silks to come into great favour. ARMSTRONG'S 100 WICKETS.

By F. B. WILSON dast Year's Cambridge Captain).

'Untablic made a fine effort against Middlesx yester-day at Braddord, Denton and Hirst being in especially good form. Both hit hard and pulled with determination on a wicket which was a trille sodden, owing to the rain overnight. All depends on the weather as to the out-come of the match, for either side ought to be able to effect a draw. Middlesex are $1$ to the good with aine wickets in hard.

effect a draw. Middlesex are $1$ to the good with ains wickets in hand.

The Australians polished off Lancashire in fine style at Liverpool, rain helping their bowlers materially, and they finally won by an innings and $0$ runs. Armstrong, who retached well, and claimed twelve victims for $2$ runs in the match; Laver "copped" six mea for $1$.

Kent collapsed badly before Susex yeareray in their first innings at Hard to the property of the state of the difficult. Dillon was top scorer with 14, and the whole redide were out tor 75. Rel howled brilliantly, his figures reading as follows:

18.3 6 80 7

In the second innings Dillon and Hearne gave the side a good start, the former especially shaping very well. At the close of play Kent had run up 116 for the loss of one wicket, Dillon being not out 10. Surrey, who commenced badly on Monday night by losing Raphael, Hayes, and Know for 85 runs, did even worse yesterday morning, and the whole side was out for 110 in 16 mg Raphael, Hayes, and Know for 85 runs, did even worse yesterday morning, and the whole side was out for 110 in 16 mg Raphael, Hayes, and Runo for 30 runs, did even worse yesterday morning, and the whole side was out for 10 in 16 mg Raphael, Hayes, Hayward, and Baler all the second for 47. In the second finings Surey made a placely attempt to make a fight of 14, Hayes, Hayward, and Baler all however, did not back them up, and they were all out for 326, leaving Gloucester but 57 to make to win. The match, therefore, is all over bar the shouting.

Arnold played a fine knock for Worcester at Leicester and collected 109 of the best, Mainly thanks to him, Worcester were able to set their opponents 378 to get to win, a really formidable score to run up against on the fourth landings.

Vervousness Depression. AND

A person whose Digestion is weak becomes Dyspeptic, Nervous, and generally Run-down be-cause the Body is ill-nourished, and suffers from what is known as mainutrition—the Nerves in cause the Body is ill-nourished, and suffers from what is known as malnutrition—the Nerves in particular.

That is why so many people—especially Women—are Depressed, morbid, melaucholy, irritable, and suffer so terribly from prolonged or intermittent Nervous attacks, facial agonies, Neuralgia, etc.

Those who have weak Digestion have urgent need of Guy's Tonic. Those who are Nervous and subject to Nerve Pains, Headache, Backache, Facial Attacks, also need Guy's Tonic. This Remedy first brings about Good Appetite and Perfect Digestion, and thus promotes enjoyment of Food, preventing the appearance of unpleasant Symptoms after meals.

Guy's Tonic then exerts a Constitutional ionic power, which is restoraive of waning Nerve Strength by its stimulative action upon the Assimilative tissues of the Body, whose office is to create Nourishment for the Nerves out of the Food you cat and should digest.

Declining Energy, waning Strength, loss of Nerve power, and a debilitated Digestion are thus all corrected by the use of Guy's Tonic, and a new lease of life seems as it were to be attained, to give the patient healthy activity, natural enjoyment, and physical vigour.

"Melancholia and Despondency have

"Melancholia and Despondency have never returned since I took the first bottle of Guy's Tonic."

Mr. J. Bird, of Summer-lane, Birmingham,

"Ites" desire to add my testimony to the great value of Guy's Tonic. It restored my Appetite, cleared the Tongue, and acted most heneficially on the Liver and Nervess. It also gave me refreshing Steep, "Treedom from Dreams, and a pleasant washing. The distressing Symptoms of Melancholia and Despondency have never treturned since I took the first bottle of Guy's Tonic."

Guy's Tonic is the most pleasant, the most efficacious, and the most largely sold Tonic-Digestive-Medicine in the World.

A Six-ounce Bottle of Guy's Tonic, price 1/12 is on sale at Chemists and Stores everywhere.
